5. Poolside Fire Pit

Poolside Fire Pit - Ryan Hughes

From pool to pit, it's all about "functional flow" according to designer Ryan Hughes. Hughes' "Big Time" fire pit lounge in Tampa is actually the epicenter of his client's pool. The 5-foot-wide fire pit is clad in glass tile and is reached via a concrete stepping pad lit with LED strip lighting. It can comfortably seat groups of eight on its circular bench covered with weather-resistant cushions. The price tag for a seemingly floating fire pit lounge? This one rang in around $35,000—a small chunk of change considering the entire outdoor living space project for the home totaled $1.1 million.
